I spent one month staying in Australia with support from ICR. During the stay, I enjoyed and experienced many things that are so different from those in Japan, from food to local culture. I lived in an area whose name is Burwood, where so much delicious food can be found. I thus gained weight during this stay. I also tried other food in Sydney, I have to say that the bread with some cabbage or some other unknown vegetables is really bad...I also took a tour in Sydney using this chance, I have to say it's really a gorgeous city that everyone could enjoy, as I attached.

I stayed in Prof. Jan Seidel's research group for this stay, and he and his students really took care of me very well. They showed great patience and taught me tons of knowledge about scanning probe microscopy, from basic usage to advanced tips. As a freshman in SPM technology, I learned a lot from them and can say that I have "some experience" in SPM technology. I thank them for taking me in and teaching me so much during this stay.

Finally, I want to thank ICR for supporting me to start this stay, which is so valuable to me.
